I was cold. I went to the store. I forgot a jacket. There were only three people in the store with me. After, I bought some eggs. As such, this was enjoyable for me.

Edited Text:

I forgot a jacket, meaning I was cold as I went to the store. There were only three people in the store with me, but – thankfully – I was alone in the egg aisle. As such, buying groceries was enjoyable for me.

Commented [JS1]: Reordering sentences to have a more logical (causal) flow.

Commented [JS2]: Deleting "after" because it didn't make any sense. Connecting "I bought some eggs" to the previous sentence and restructuring to make the sentence more dynamic from a syntactic perspective.

Commented [JS3]: Clarifying ambiguous "this".
